Abstract

The hard and soft aspects of the field of digital imaging have been developing remarkably in these days. The field has consolidated figurative imagery from concepts that only existed in futuristic theory as it appeals to various systems of expression and communication. In addition the software industry and information services in Far East Asia leaders, Japan and South Korea, have been rapidly concentrating on this field. Therefore, the foundation to develop these following fields is needed: extensive education which nourishes researchers, government corporations, the academy, and industry, by organizing a system of applied research for related industries such as Contents Production.
